Music's Part In Motion Pictures

It is only recent that the ingenious method of selecting music to fit the action of motion pictures came into its own. Since the first feature film was made about ten years ago, music struggled to be recognized in the screen world. Many motion pictures are known to have "fallen flat" as the expression goes, because improper music was permitted to accompany them. Little is known by the movie-going public of a "Thematic cue sheet" which almost every exhibitor of motion pictures employs with the showing of his screen wares. The value of this cue sheet to the theatre owner is difficult to estimate for not only does it raise the standard of his theatre by cultivating a taste for good music among his patrons, but it also considerably increases the enjoyment of his screen offerings.

The "thematic cue sheet" supplies the orchestra leader, pianist or organist suggested selections that best interpret the action in the scenes on the screen. For example, as the film is unrolled, the expert who plans this cue sheet, selects: "AT SCREENING—Where Is The Dawn" (Edwards)—1-4 minutes. When the theatre musician gets this cue sheet he is informed of the selection to play—who composed it and how long the sequence lasts on the screen. On the next line the first few bars of the composition are supplied, enabling the leader who finds he is without the specified number in his library to substitute with an aria in the same mood. The next sequence to be accompanied by music is let us say, AN AUGURAL BALL, so the cue sheet suggests "Valse Violette" (Ludwig) and the length of time it appears on the screen—1-2 minutes. Tragic, happy, comic moments lend themselves perfectly to music—and the thematic cue sheet gives the musician the proper musical interpretation of every film that comes to his theatre. This method has been a great aid to the small town theatre musician striving to place his programs on a plane with the big city movie places.

The next time you visit your local movie theatre, note the fittingness and harmony of the music to the "goings-on" on the screen. In a manner speaking, it is a wedding of two arts—and they are happy though married.

CONTRA COSTA COUNTY ENJOYS GOOD HEALTH REPORT SHOWS

Dr. Blake Makes Annual Report to County Supervisors On Health Conditions

Contra Costa county enjoys the distinction of being one of the healthiest counties in the state according to the annual report of Dr. Charles R. Blake county health officer who filed the report with the Board of Supervisors yesterday.

Number of vaccinations: 1924—0 1925—1217.

Number of county visits made (as per monthly report): 1925—125.

Total mileage for year 1925—6618 miles.

Commenting on the above statistical report, Dr. Blake says: "As shown by the above record, we have had a remarkable healthy year. Only 1 case of diphtheria against 35 the previous year; only 31 houses quarantined for all contagious diseases against 59 the year before and in our work for prevention of disease we gave 2659 toxin-antitoxin treatments and 4612 the year before or a grand total of 7274 treatments in this county made safe against diphtheria for life, which figures do not include about 1500 more children treated in Richmond. Also in the whole county we have vaccinated against smallpox 2659 children without a single infection or a single bad result. These results and figures speak for themselves and should result in Contra Costa county being one of the healthiest counties in the state.

Fatal Accident Is Followed by Big Damage Suit

Suit was filed in the Superior Court yesterday by Charles F. Bevins of Richmond, against J. C. B. Cheda, wealthy San Rafael banker, as the result of an automobile accident in which Bevins' 10-year-old daughter, Catherine, was fatally injured.

Bevins charges that the accident was due to carelessness and negligence on the part of Cheda. The accident occurred on Cutting boulevard on November 22. Bevins asks $300 to cover hospital and funeral expense of the death of his child, and $25,000 damages.

Cheda rushed the child to a Berkeley hospital after the accident, where she died the following day.

The coroner's jury, which heard the evidence in the case, absolved Cheda of all blame in the verdict, which it returned.

CAPTAINS WIFE WILL RECEIVE $4,500 AWARD

Roseanna Olsen of Benicia, widow of Captain Charles Olsen, deceased, who was drowned in Suisun bay last September, when he was swept from a tug owned by the Harbor Tug and Barge company, will receive $4,500 damages from his employer. The original claim which Mrs. Olsen had, was in the sum of $10,000, but she received permission from the court to compromise. She claimed that negligence on the part of the Harbor Tug and Barge company of Oakland and San Francisco, and Frederick W. Swank, who was dismantling a derelict and had care and control of that vessel, caused her husband's death.

Olsen met his death when the tug Pirate, towing the barge Pyramid on the night of September 18 last, collided with the mooring cable attached to the stern of the Alden Anderson, a derelict, which burned to the water's edge in October, 1924, with the loss of several lives.

Swank refused to settle, stating that he was a representative of the government in dismantling the derelict and could not be sued. The Harbor Tug and Barge company of Oakland and San Francisco, and the Erickson Navigation company, which owned the barge, will make the settlement.

Miss McKenzie Is Slightly Injured

Miss Norma McKenzie, daughter of Superior Judge and Mrs. A. B. McKenzie, of Martinez, narrowly escaped being seriously injured when the automobile in which she was riding was wrecked by the car of W. E. Farlow of Crockett.

Both young people were taken to their homes where their injuries were found to be of a minor nature.

FIVE ISSUES TO BE PRESSED BY THE PRESIDENT DURING 1926

President Is Backed By House In His Campaign For Economy

By JOHN T. LAMBERT,
Staff Correspondent Universal Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—President Coolidge, sustained by popular approval supported by an enthusiastic House and watched intently for any slip by a none too friendly Senate, faced the year 1926 today with these important prospects:

That his $325,000,000 tax-slash bill will be rushed through Congress in a whirl of non-partisan support.

That his desire to strip the ordinary expenses of government to $3,000,000,000, for the first time since the war, may be achieved.

That his demand for an air force commensurate with the prestige of the nation will result in increased military forces and development of scores of private flying units which can be commanded in emergency.

That his program for improvement of inland waterways to meet the increased needs of transportation resulting from industrial expansion will result at least in elaborate development of the Colorado and Mississippi rivers.

That his World Court proposal, provoking a growing opposition, may be decorated, by the Senate, with a flock of reservations that will render it less harmful, from the viewpoint of the irreconcilables.

Farm troubles of the West, which have brought bankruptcy to thousands and the collapse of hundreds of banks, stand as one of the vexing problems before Coolidge. He will assist cooperative marketing and will encourage the formation by private capital of export corporations to market the surplus crops.

He is optimistic that the coal strike will be settled before another week has passed, but wants congress to provide him with arms to meet any future industrial war.

He will accept the invitation to the preparatory League of Nations arms conference, but, it is expected, with reservations that the parity shall avoid political alliances, that the United States shall not be hooked into any of the European security pacts and that the league shall not be given authority to enforce any disarmament pact with force.

Recorders Office Has Big Increase

The annual report of County Recorder Irene Hurley, made public Saturday shows that there was an increase of nearly $3,000 in the total fees collected for recordation services on 1925. There were 13,001 instruments filed in the Recorder's office during the year for which the sum of $19,158.40 was collected in fees. In one month $1902.50 was collected in fees. The total collections for 1924 were $16,274.50, which shows that there was a considerable increase in 1925.

Huzefka Injured When Cars Collide

Slight injuries were received by L. Huzefka, 146 Fourth street, Standard Oil employee in a rear end automobile collision, involving his car and one driven by Frank Nunn, 616 Florida avenue, early Friday morning. Huzefka was slightly bruised and cut about the face.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The Rumanian government, headed by Premier Brittanio, resigned today, according to a central news dispatch from Bucharest.

STRICT CENSORSHIP

LONDON, Jan. 2.—A heavy censorship has been imposed in Rumania and all dispatches relating to Crown Prince Carol's renunciation of his right to the throne, effectively during an authoritative statement of the reasons that led him to become a private citizen. However, numerous motives were ascribed to his decision today, among them were:

1. A revival of his romance with "Zizi" Lambrino, his morganatic wife.

2. Love affairs with various women, including a Jewish girl, who is said to possess the most beautiful figure in Rumania.

3. Disagreement with the government with Premier Gratianno, whom Queen Marie the Prince's mother actively supports.

4. Forced abdication as a sequel to scandals, connected with the Rumanian air service.

5. That politics as well as romance figure in Prince Carol's decision is the firm belief of Rumanians. It is stated. "One report credits Carol with the ambition to stir up the Rumanian peasants to revolt on the grounds that the premier forced him to resign his rights to the throne."

Countess Appeals To Federal Court To Enter the U. S.

(By Universal Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Countess Catherine Karolyi, through counsel, today appealed to federal court to gain admission into the United States.

Her attorneys filed a writ of mandamus in District of Columbia Superior Court to compel Secretary Kellogg to show cause why she was barred from the United States.

Kellogg refused to allow the countess to enter the country because of her alleged "radical" opinions.

Countess Karolyi is the wife of Count Karolyi, first president of the Hungarian republic. The republic later gave way to the present Horthy regime in Hungary.

The writ directed Kellogg to have the American consul at Paris give the passport to the countess. The Karolyi case has been almost continuously agitated in official Washington since Kellogg last fall barred the countess. The State Department has remained adamant in its stand. On Capitol Hill there have been numerous protests against exclusion of the countess. Senator Borah, Republican, of Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has taken the lead in denouncing the department's action, and has announced he will move to strip the Secretary of State of his arbitrary power to exclude foreigners.

Venice Recovers From Panic Which Followed Quake

VENICE, Jan. 2.—The people of Venice tonight were slowly recovering from the panic into which the latest earthquake threw them. A great crowd gathered today in the square of St. Mark facing the famous cathedral and prayed for safety. All open spaces were filled with men women and children who feared a recurrence of the quake.

When the earth tremors first were felt crowds in the moving picture houses rushed terrorized to the streets. Screaming mothers with small children were crushed and injured but none fatally.

Thousands sought refuge in Gondolas only to find themselves in greater danger when the water of the canal thrown up by the quake overflowed into the streets. When the shocks ceased a majority of the people returned to their homes but hundreds of the more timid remained in the dark streets all night.

Scores of victims of nerve shock were treated in the hospitals. The material loss was comparatively slight and no art treasures so far as is known were damaged. Probably a dozen persons were injured by chimneys shaken down by the quake.

LIEGE SUFFERS MOST FROM THE RECENT STORM

BRUSSELS, Jan. 2.—The city of Liege with 6 feet of water covering its business section, as the result of the recent storms, was cut off from all communications with the outside world tonight except by boat. It was officially estimated tonight that 9000 homes have been flooded.

Even if the heavy rainfall ceases immediately it will require more than two weeks for the water to subside. Soldiers are having the greatest difficulty in treating the homeless. The king and cabinet are now in Liege.

Pinole Plans to Raise Church Fund

A campaign to raise funds for the construction of a new edifice is being planned by the parishioners of St. Joseph's church in Pinole. A definite program is being outlined, which, it is hoped, will realize sufficient funds to insure construction of a building within the next two years. Rev. Charles Phillips, pastor, is arranging for a meeting of the parishioners about the middle of January to further plans.

Pago-Pago Reported to Have Been Hit Hard by Terrific Wind Storm

COMMUNICATION STOPPED

Hospitals Are Reported To Be Taxed in Caring For Those Injured

(By Universal Service)

HONOLULU, Jan. 2.—Striking with the suddenness and force of an earthquake, a terrific tropical hurricane today wrought ruin and havoc in American and British Samoa.

Buildings have been levelled, many persons have been injured, power lines were destroyed, communication has been practically cut off and a general condition of utter demoralization has resulted, according to meager radio messages that have come through to the navy radio station at Pearl Harbor here from Tutuila, queen island of the American Samoa group.

Early reports indicate nine lives have been lost, although the hospitals are taxed to the utmost to care for the injured and property damage is so extensive that no adequate estimate can be made for days.

On Tutuila is Pago Pago, principal white settlement in Samoa, a United States Navy station and an extensive American hospital. Because of the incomplete nature of reports which say damages to buildings was extensive, cut gives no details, great fear is expressed here for the safety of the hospital patients and the American residents of Pago Pago.

Communication with other islands in the Samoa group has not yet been established. Tutuila itself was out of communication with the rest of the world from 5 o'clock this morning, when the storm was nearing its height, until late this afternoon. Messages after re-establishment of communication reported the storm sweeping on toward Apia and other islands in British Samoa.

First news of the catastrophe came at 5 this morning, when operators at Pearl Harbor picked up a hastily sent message from Tutuila. "Terrific hurricane sweeping island," it reported. "Many hurt; several already in hospital."

There the message broke off. Hour after hour passed, during which operators at Pearl Harbor made every possible effort to get word from the stricken island. It was not until late that the messages were again resumed, and even then conditions were such that communication with unsatisfactory and meager.

NAVY GETS REPORT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Great destruction of property with possible human casualties has been done by a severe hurricane which swept Samoa, according to a radio message from the Pacific Region, received by the Navy department tonight.

One message sent by the Pearl Harbor Naval Base as the result of an interrupted report from Samoa, asserted that several persons were in the hospital as the result of the storm, but a later message from the naval governor of Samoa said there "were no known casualties."

The message from the naval governor at Tutuila, Samoa, to Rear Admiral Eberle, chief of naval operations, read:

"Electric lights, powers and telephone lines down, island government road closed, water supply system damaged."

STATES SPEND MONEY

Almost staggering are figures the department of commerce offers in showing the tremendous increase in costs of state government, using 1917 as a basis.

Congressmen striving to make a creditable reduction in the federal tax levy condemn the apparent unwillingness of states to co-operate by at least not increasing their levies. No relief comes to taxpayers if a half-billion is lopped off in Washington and a half billion is added by the states.

One of the chief points open to criticism lies in the increases in cost of maintenance and operation of the states' general departments—in other words, the every-day upkeep cost. In 1924 this item for the forty-eight states stood at $1,001,465,258, or $9 per capita. In 1917 it was $4.19 and in 1923, $8.17.

Turning to the total payments for 1924, including maintenance and operation of public service enterprises, interest on debt outlays for permanent improvements amounted to $1,513,628,021, or nearly three times that of 1917.

The net indebtedness, funded and floating, less sinking fund assets, was $1,283,467,433, or $10.63 per capita. In 1923 it was $8.72 and in 1917, $4.93.

If the states are to keep up any general permanent improvement schedule, strict economy is essential. True economy will not halt progress, and it will insure the future. In the end progress will be best served by the policy of economy.

We notice where the ubiquitous "Jimmy" Walker, New York's next east side mayor, is going to pack his sample case and make another selling trip to the south. Here is hoping he reconciles the southern and eastern democratic wings some more so that the party will have something for the next national campaign.

Mutiny On The High Seas

Sebastian Cabot, son of John Cabot, who sailed from England to the North American coast five years after Columbus, had a varied career.

His first voyage, on which he may have accompanied his father, had fearful encounters with the icebergs of the northern seas. Then he managed to land in the region of Newfoundland and take possession in the name of England.

Hearing stories of Cabot's daring and boldness, Ferdinand of Spain, sent for him to come to his court. But the king died before an expedition was begun and Cabot was compelled by the jealous Spaniards to return to England.

However, more than ten years later, he was back in Spain again and, sailing toward the coast of South America under Spanish colors.

It is said that the Portuguese sent a spying squadron after his fleet. So you may see that the whole business of exploration was bound up in envy and intrigue.

His own men were envious of each other and more than all else envious of him. Murder and mutiny were in the air. One historian tells us that sealed orders were given each ship of the expedition as to the succession in command. That very fact was enough to invite these rough and ready seamen to murder.

Finally a mutiny of a dandy sort broke out. Cabot's life was scarcely worth a dime, should he fall to act quickly. He didn't fall.

Without hesitation he landed the mutineers at the first point of land and proceeded tranquilly on his way.

He sailed up the Parana river, of South America and found the river he called Rio de la Plata. The natives here were not ready for friendly overtures. They seized three innocent Spaniards. Cabot again acted with promptness, opening fire on the natives. The battle which followed was swift and bitter. The losses were reported as, 300 natives killed, 25 Spaniards.

Cabot was soon able to see the Mountains of Peru. But his funds failed and he was able to go no further.

When at length he returned to Spain, he became homesick for Bristol and England. It is said that he was made Superintendent of Naval Affairs in England, and spent his last days in that capacity.

Swift Growth of South American Trade Reflected in New Temple of Finance

BOSTON IN BUENOS AIRES

South America, land of romance and revolution, is rapidly rising to great commercial heights. And Yankee enterprise is adding its magical touch.

Typical of the present spirit of trade progress is the new building of the Buenos Aires branch of the First National Bank of Boston. It is not only the finest commercial structure in South America. It is one of the finest bank buildings in the world.

The beautiful facade of the twelve-story structure is an adaptation of the classical Spanish Renaissance. By far the most striking feature is the sixty-five foot portal. It is gorgeously carved. For this stone Buenos Aires turned to the rugged hills of Indiana, which not only provide the bulk of America's building stone, but now furnish large quantities to South America and other foreign lands, particularly when rare beauty is sought by elaborate sculpturing. Ideas of the nation are symbolized by three life sized figures just above the entrance way. The entire portal is given a tone of richness by the delicate tracery with which the Indiana Limestone is treated.

John Hancock, first governor of Massachusetts, was a charter director of the First National Bank of Boston back in 1784. By creation and growth of the Buenos Aires branch American merchants no longer are compelled to deal through foreign institutions. This step, like many similar ones, has helped to cement closer trade relations.

St. Augustine Builds Humanized Jail Where Prisoners Gain in Weight and Well Being

St. Augustine, Fla., holds the distinction of being the first city in the United States to build a totally new type of county jail and to establish a regime whose ideal is to make the prisoners clean, strong and healthy. For three years it has been experimenting with a model prison farm which has attracted the attention of prison authorities and builders throughout the United States. The results have been highly successful. It is said that over ninety per cent of all the crimes, petty thievery, disorderly conduct and other law breaking practices can be traced directly back to the bad living conditions of the offender. Here the authorities have experimented with the theory that clean living and good health go a long way to set a man on the right road. New plans and rules are the watchword. The county physician has reported that every prisoner gains in weight.

No white women are sent to this jail. No prisoner has ever been subjected to physical punishment. Orders have been given to never fire on a man if seen escaping. A physician keeps watch on the health and bodily condition of the inmates. The negro women prisoners work in the laundry and about the prison. Those men who are not in vigorous health or who are old, work on the farm growing vegetables, citrus fruits and other produce, while the physically able work on Florida's new highways under the state laws. Each night when the men come home from their road making, they completely disrobe and enjoy a hot or cold shower as they prefer. Then they put on clean newly washed clothes and slippers and go to the dining room where they are served all the food they desire. It is good wholesome fare and consists of soups, meats, fruits, vegetables, much of which has been grown on the farm itself. Their life here is not unlike the routine of a lumberjack in the Canadian woods.

They put on clean sterilized clothes every day and do not wear the garments which they have worn at work the day before. The evening shower bath is compulsory. It is a daily practice in personal hygiene that many of them have not known, and they soon learn to enjoy it.

The prison is not a prison in the sense that the inmates make vicious contacts and acquire unwholesome habits. It is a welfare center and is known as The St. Augustine County Welfare Center. The entire building is made of concrete and the interior is kept scrupulously clean, being flushed daily with water. The prisoners are at work. The wings, severely devoted to the negro and white males, are screened by steel enclosures. The beds are cots hung on steel frames, like steamer berths, with plenty of clean warm bedding. At the further ends of the wings are screened lavatories. There are books and magazines for those who care to read.

A unique feature of the prison is that it is raised above the ground on high concrete pillars. It is absolutely vermin-proof. Hard work in the open, absolute physical cleanliness, regular hours and sleep, wholesome food and time themselves to read or play games, fill their twenty-four hours. On Sunday mornings, afternoons, and evenings, speakers come from St. Augustine and other cities to address the prisoners.

"The prisoners feel better and they do much more work than before the establishment of the prison farm," said Mr. J. D. Rahner, chairman of the county commissioners. "Instead of becoming a liability they became an asset. What is more important they become more useful to themselves and acquire new standards of personal hygiene. It pays any community to have clean, well-ordered vigorous prisoners. It is a good investment. Our experiment has proved most gratifying for when the prisoners have served their term and leave, they have learned a new mode of life and a good percentage are following it out and have become good citizens. Everything has been done to give an opportunity to prisoners who, perhaps, have never lived in decent surroundings or have enjoyed the comforts of a clean, healthy life.

"DEVILS CARGO" IS SHOWING AT THE RICHMOND

An old Sacramento steamboat, torn wheeler of the type used on the river 75 years ago, was found, refitted and put in shape for use in "The Devils Cargo," the new picture at the California Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

Not only are the three principal players of the goddess of beauty, but members of the supporting group are also disciples of Venus.

This production was made on a lavish scale and is studded with luxury from beginning to end.

Constance Bennett plays Sally, the gold-digger type of show girl.

Irene is enacted by Joan Crawford. She is the unsophisticated little girl from the east side, who becomes a dancer in "The Main-tenances."

Sally O'Neill shines as Mary, the young Irish girl who is not lured by the glitter of gold.

"Sally, Irene and Mary" reveals the lives of three stage favorites and how misadventure in love came to them. It is a story of the early California gold days, written by Charles Whittaker, under the title, "The River Boat," and adapted to the screen by A. P. Younger.

The featured players in "The Devils Cargo" are Wallace Beery, Pauline Starke, Claire Adams and William Collier, Jr. Others are Raymond Hatton, Dale Fuller, George Cooper and John Dillon. Other features on the same program include "The Heart Breaker," an Imperial comedy; "Kinograms," world news events.

Bevy of Beauties Presented In New Picture At the California

ALL STAR BILL IS FEATURED AT THE CALIFORNIA

The California Theatre offers its initial presentation of vaudeville for the season of 1926 today, with a gala bill of five acts, all star vaudeville, each act a feature in itself, in conjunction with the screen feature "Recompense," featuring Marie Prevost and Monte Blue.

Coming at the head of the first bill of the New Year is a sparkling act of song and dance, "LA FANTASIE." In this novel offering two beautiful girls, with many changes of dazzling costumes, and a clever boy present with a song and dance.

Fields and Brown in their latest skit "New Month" have a snappy comedy act, with a dash of burlesque, that is a laugh sensation.

"Elite Entertainers" is the billing of a high class comedy singing act presented by Wellbaum and Marco. These two boys have a likable personality and what is more have talent to back it up. They will be big favorites with their auditors.

Just fresh from a successful season in one of San Francisco's leading picture palaces The Perry with their talking banjos will be another bright light on the bill. Their medley of popular airs will be long remembered.

"The Larry Simon of Vaudeville" is the title given Bert Clinton. This versatile acrobat with a comedy dog and a set of parallel bars entertains and causes many laughs with his burlesque antics.

"Recompense," Robert Keable's sequel to his first sensational novel, "Simon Called Peter," with Marie Prevost as Julie Gamelyn, and Monte Blue portraying the fighting parson, Peter Graham, that Harry Beaumont has directed, is today's screen feature.

"Simon Called Peter" it will be remembered, is the story that has been looked upon with covetous eyes by almost every producer in the business, although none could afford to take a chance with it.

"Recompense," as a continuation, picks up the characters with all the fire and animation that made the former book the talk of two continents, and Beaumont has loaded it with real artistry, so that none of the original intention is lost.

The supporting cast in this Warner Bros. "Classic of the Screen" includes John Patrick, John Roche, Etta Lee and William C. Davidson.

Other features on the same program include "Felix Goes West," a Felix the cat comic; "Kinograms," world news events; Carl Richard's California Orchestra; Larry Canelo, at the organ.

Trade Conflict in Latin America Discussed by U. S. Bureau Head

By Dr. Julius Klein, director of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce.

(5th INSTALLMENT)

The distribution problem is by far the most important element in the effort to capitalize our favorable trade position in Latin America. Of course, American representation whether it be in the form of branch office, joint sales agency for non-competitive lines, export house, manufacturer's agent or personal traveler, is indispensable in most cases to dependence on native or foreign distributive connections. But what immediate profits are a consideration, the volume of present business does not justify in Latin American areas the expense of such an American sales organization and consequently must be placed in native or foreign facilities. Most of our pre-war Latin American trade and a good many post-war agency arrangements were made with foreign concerns in Latin America, and doubtless some of these arrangements may be continued profitably for business in normal times is not anticipated by any high degree of patriotism and if profits can be made on American commodities these foreign agencies will not let profitable competitors interfere with commissions. Nevertheless, it seems highly desirable to re-evaluate such agency arrangements now in the light of re-organized European competition and to determine whether or not they should be continued. It might prove helpful if contracts carried a clause which obligated such foreign houses to keep their American principals current in advance of all lines handled.

While emphasis is being placed on the necessity for this vigorous re-evaluation of our agency relations abroad, a word of caution seems pertinent. Here in the United States, since the war we have effected some violent business reorganizations. We have performed major operations in the home office and not infrequently these changes have affected the export distributive organization in the field. It should be remembered that with is an invaluable element in doing business in Latin America; that it sometimes takes years to build up something that can be destroyed in a few months through executive prejudice or caprice. Therefore, changes in the foreign distributive organization should be made conservatively and only after careful investigation, and should by no means follow automatically upon any readjustment in the home office.

Another phase of representation which should receive attention is the question of facilities which foreign distributor possess, to cover the territory which the American exporter wishes to reach or to carry out the "service" aspects which are often a peculiar outstanding virtue of many American wares, such as automobiles, machinery, office appliances, etc. Some of our exporters, entering agency relations in Latin America without adequate information, have given exclusive representation to firms without facilities to cover a large area or to back up their American lines with proper service. There is now little excuse for lack of knowledge in these particulars. The Department of Commerce in collaboration with the Consular service, maintains an organization in Latin America and in Washington equipped to provide this very kind of information. A two cent stamp will sometimes save thousands of dollars tied up in dormant accounts or any of the many other aspects of unsatisfactory representation.

In addition to the customary advertising facilities, the indirect values to be found in general nationalistic propaganda in Latin America is very important. It is a truism to say that better acquaintance promotes business, yet this is an important consideration in Latin America and one which, by comparison with the activities of our European competitors, is being neglected. Rather have we been all too frequent inclined passively to leave the field to a small group of rancorous hired anti-American agitators, most of them with unsavory records which are notorious in Latin America, but not so widely known in this country, where their distorted vituperation is often accorded greater consideration than it deserves. The sometimes erroneous impressions gained from the more serious treatment given in the Latin American press is extraordinary happenings or sensational expressions of opinion in the United States ought to be counter-balanced by the wider dissemination of information about the United States in more proper perspective. Encouragement should be given to the extension of American news services in Latin America. At the present time in some countries they do not begin to equal in scope or effectiveness the similar services supplied by our European competitor nations.

In any consideration of competition the matter of commercial intelligence is as vital to success as is reconnaissance and prompt current information to an army in the field. New competitive forces are being invented and old ones revived in Latin America. Indirect financing requires more thorough appraisal of final objectives. Financial conditions are changing and with them credit ratings. Established markets are expanding and new ones being opened up. Circumstances and personality conspire to afford an opportunity here or there to be capitalized only today. Great raw material reservoirs must be surveyed in their relation to price and production. Dormant markets are being awakened through new discoveries or the eventual fruits of patient development.

The Department of Commerce maintains 10 offices in Latin America whose function it is to keep American business current in advance of these and a multitude of other elements of change in international trade relationships. That the American business community appreciates in fuller degree the work of this service agency is disclosed in the 7000 trade inquiries handled each day through this department, a ten fold increase in the last four years. But even of greater significance is the obvious recognition on the part of our business men that current information is indispensable to export operations and that our foreign sales organizations to be practically effective must comprise mobile unit capable of absorbing temporary setbacks, and equipped with tactical knowledge and power to push forward, retreat, or concentrate as competition or local conditions affect the area of our advance into the world's markets.

Finally, the American exporter interested in the Latin American market has come to realize that there is no such thing as trade conquest, that is, all gains in the world's markets must be made on the basis of continuing service if they are to be held permanently. This is discouraging speculative enterprise and encouraging the entrance into this great Latin American market of the best elements in our commerce and industry. And they are proceeding on the basis that trade with one Latin neighbor must advance on the basis of reciprocal advantages, that

Buick Master Six Seven Passenger Sedan

People who look for and appreciate comfort in a motor car are invited to try the added comfort in the Better Buick.

Seating space is generous. Leg room is ample enough for tall people to relax. Cushions are deep and yielding and tilted to a restful angle.

Rear springs are Buick cantilevers, which smooth out road inequalities far better than any other type. Special size low-pressure tires are standard equipment on all models.

Baby Saved From Heart Trouble

Nov. 6, 1925.
Our baby, Myrtle, had been ailing for about two years, during which time we had taken her to many physicians, none of whom knew what was the matter with her.

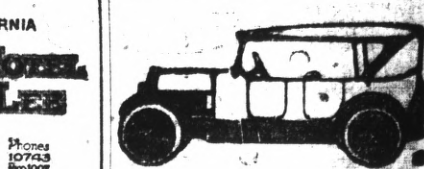

Myrtle steadily grew worse. Her heart beat rapidly and noisily, she had but little blood, and the pallor of her face was like the whiteness of a sheet of paper. She finally became so weak that she could neither walk nor eat.

Some doctors thought it might be her teeth, but they had all come through and she was getting worse every day.

We were recommended to see Fong Wan. He found that she was suffering from heart trouble. She has taken the Fong Wan Herbs for three months and is in fine health.
